Founders of CPC

CPC Cares...

At CPC, we know that losing a pet is like losing a close friend, and we believe that all companions should receive a dignified farewell.

Established in 1979 by my father-in-law, Clive Jackman and myself, Ray Hale, CPC provides a range of pet cremation services for bereaved pet owners with sensitivity and respect.

Remembering loved ones...

From the beginning, Clive and I have said that each companion that comes into our lives and fills our hearts with warmth deserves to be remembered.

However, we never imagined that we would meet so many wonderful people; hearing their stories of times shared with their pets remind us of why we founded CPC.

At CPC, we understand the special bond between a person and their companion, which is why we extend our hands to you with warmth and compassion.

Ray Hale.

Individual Cremation

CPC's individual cremation service provides you with the peace of mind that comes from knowing that your pet has been handled with compassion and sensitivity.

Many people choose to leave their companion in the care of their veterinary practice, from where we will collect your pet for individual cremation.

But whatever you choose, we at CPC, take the greatest of care, and you can be assured that your companion is individually cremated with dignity and respect.

Attending the Cremation

You are welcome to attend the individual cremation service of your companion, providing you with one last chance to say farewell.

On arrival, your bereavement advisor will explain the service to you and be on hand throughout to provide you with support and comfort.

After you have said your final farewells you may wish to witness your pet's cremation. For those who would find this option reassuring and beneficial a monitor in the farewell room will enable further viewing of the cremation service.

You may wish to take your companion's ashes home with you on the day. While you wait you are welcome to look through our Books of Remembrance or spend time in our tranquil garden.

If you would like to attend the individual cremation service of your companion please telephone 01763 207700 and speak to a bereavement advisor prior to the collection of your pet from your veterinary practice.
